RESEARCH INTERESTS

My fields of interest range from (post-)structuralist poetics to concepts of anti-art and from deconstructing notions of the avant-garde to queer performance strategies. The media I work with are video, installation, performance, music, spoken word.

WORK

I teach at Buckinghamshire New University since 2003 as part of the Film & TV course. I have designed and taught a module on experimental film and video art, which is both theoretical [theory, history and methodology of artists' film] and practical [students have to make a short film of their own]. I have also taught montage theory, new media and documentary. Since 2014, I also teach all the theory modules on an MA in Digital Animation. I have experience in module coordination, course designing, tutorials, second-marking/moderation and dissertation supervision. I have also completed a teaching certificate and my dissertation piece focused on whether creativity can be assessed. I have experience of working with students with disabilities.
